DAYTONA, Fla., March 16.—Barney Oldfield, driving against time with a flying start, in a 200-horse power Benz automobile of special design, covered the fastest mile today ever traveled by a human being. His time was 27 and 33-100 seconds.

The previous record was set here four years ago by Marriot, who drove a special Stanley steam car, one mile in 28.7 seconds, or an average speed of 127.6 miles an hour. Oldfield's average today was 131.72.

Oldfield again launched his great car from a standing start for a mile against time, and crossed the finish line with another record. His time was 40.53 seconds, against 41.23 seconds, made with the same car by Hemery in England. The timing for both races was done by C. H. Warner, official timer for the American Automobile association, with the mechanical device used at the Atlanta and Indianapolis speedways, which has been officially adopted by the association.

Ralph De Palma, Oldfield's rival, who was prevented from starting against him by a broken piston, acted as representative for the contest board. A surveyor's certificate has been filed for the distance posts, and only the formal acceptance by the contest board is necessary before the record passes officially into the history of the annihilation of distance.

The best previous official record for the mile from a flying start by a gasoline car is two miles in 58.25 seconds, made at Ormond Beach, Fla., in a 200-horse power car, by Demong, in 1906, at an average of 123.3 miles an hour.

The best speed ever made by a locomotive is five miles in 2 minutes, 30 seconds, over the Plant system, in March, 1901. Glenn H. Curtiss, the aviator, covered a mile from a flying start in an eight-cylinder motorcycle in 46.25 seconds, in 1907.

MAYBRAY VICTIMS ARE INCREASING EVERY DAY

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., March 16.—Today's sessions of the trial of John C. Maybray and eighty-six other defendants, charged with swindling operations by fraudulent use of the mails, produced a kaleidoscope of testimony not before couched during the trial. William H. McGrath, aged 28, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and of the St. Paul Law school, according to the evidence, was James G. Kile of Cicero, Ill., aged 14, who testified to the loss of a similar amount.

T. E. Graham of San Antonio, Tex., lost $10,000; James Webster of Shattuck, Pa., $3,000; and J. B. Schurman, a German farmer, lost $10,000. McGrath, aged 28, a graduate of the University of Minnesota and of the St. Paul Law school, according to the evidence, was James G. Kile of Cicero, Ill., aged 14, who testified to the loss of a similar amount.

McGrath recited a remarkable story of his loss. Louis W. Stowe, son of an Episcopal rector of Minneapolis, solicited McGrath in the matter, assuring him that it was a former college friendship that prompted him to ask the witness to help him to carry out the scheme. According to the testimony, it was this declaration alone that induced him to bring $10,000 to Council Bluffs.

When I got home, McGrath took over the situation. McGrath, I took Stowe out to the park and pleaded with him not to go into the deal.

Assistant District Attorney Stewart elicited from McGrath that he finally went so far as to get a draft in favor of his brother and put it in an envelope preparatory to mailing it to St. Louis. McGrath, the witness then declared he said Maybray, who induced him to try to get his money at the bank. He said:

"I went to the First National bank, which issued the draft, and the teller told me to endorse it with my brother's name, and when I did so he readily gave me the money."

McGrath made a civil suit against the bank for the recovery of the money. Ernest E. Hart, former national Republican committeeman for Iowa, is an officer of the bank.

McGrath then told of the usual ending of the contest on which he lost his money.

James G. Kile of Cicero, Ill., was taken to Little Rock to purchase timber land. He ended his visit with an investment of $10,000 in a horse race which went against him.

The First Chapter of This Story Appeared in The Tribune Monday, March 14

This absorbing story by Christy Mathewson was begun in The Tribune Monday, March 14. Two chapters have already been printed. The story has to do with the ambition of Hal Harriman, a baseball player of the American league. It is a story that is of intense interest to every lover of the game, and who is there that is not? To other men, the story is a mere tale, but to the baseball fan it is a story that can be had only in The Salt Lake Tribune. Issues containing the preceding chapters can be had at The Tribune business office.

CHAPTER IV.

The Jerry Harriman Scholarship Prize.

When Lowell university won the college baseball championship in 1876 the victory was due to a large extent to the wonderful all-around work of Jerry Harriman. As a pitcher he had never up to that time had an equal, and he could play almost any other position on the team well. In those days a club would have only one pitcher and he was expected to pitch almost every game of the season, which often meant pitching every day in the week but Sunday. When not pitching he played an outfield position.

There is a world of difference from the way the game is conducted in the colleges today. In these days a nine will pitch about every second game, and they don't do anything but pitch, and then only in their regular turns. Besides being a great pitcher, Jerry was also a great fielder. In fact, he was a great all-around player. He was a good pitcher who can bat, but Jerry could both pitch and bat, and he made a great name for himself as a college athlete. After he had been graduated he went into business in the middle west and became very wealthy.

As a young lad he had been weak physically and his heart was said to be affected; he was not expected to live to grow up. When he was five years old the doctors said he couldn't live a year. There came to his home town, a young man, a doctor, who opened a school of physical culture. He had a wonderfully well developed body, was a great enthusiast on athletics and he made a great effort to get the young boys around town who were weak physically to come to him.

Manager Grant immediately went to Ogden to change the date and get out the advertising.
